Jenkins elected SDP chief

LONDON, July 3 (R) - Roy Jenkins. once a senior Labor cabinet minister, spoke of winning Britain's next general election after becoming leader of the new Social, Democratic Party (SDP) Friday night.
He beat another former Labor minister.

David Owen, by more than 5.000 votes in a postal ballot of the new party's 65,000 members. The delighted winner immediately told reporters: "I will lead the party in the direction of winning the next election." The task facing bim is to revive the flagging fortunes of the SDP, which bas seen its ambitious bid to "break the mould" of British politics overshadowed by the Falklands crisis. Since Jenkins won a by-election in March. local elections and another by-election have indicated that the party's popularity has waned while Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's handling of the Falklands conflict has sharply improved support for the ruling Conservatives.

But the new leader said Friday night he thought his election to the leadership might reverse the decline: "I regard today's events as a very natural point of relaunch.

His victory ended a gentlemanly leadership contest which had nonetheless caused ripples of anxiety in the Liberal Party. partners with the SDP in a centrist electoral alliance. Liberal leader David Steel bad made clear bis preference for Jenkins, whose long political experience made him the elder statesman of the four former ministers who left the increasingly left-leaning Labor Party to found the SDP last year.

The cheerful. 61-year-old leader is a former home secretary (interior minister) and chancellor of the exchequer (finance minister). He has also served a four-year term as president of the European Common Market's Executive Commission. His defeated opponent, former Foreign Secretary Dr. Owen, is 17 years bis junior.

Jenkins pledged to make his priority the fight against mass unemployment.

Deftly swiping at both the ruling Conservatives and the disunited opposition Labor Party he said: "We must offer a realistic route away from present unemployment levels. That is the central issue."

Arab panel to visit Moscow

TAIF. July 3 (Agencies) — A restricted Arab League committee delegation will fly to Moscow Sunday for talks on the situation in Lebanon and on ways the Soviet Union might help bring about a withdrawal of Israeli troops from that country. informed sources said here Friday night.

The delegation will include Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sabah Al Ahmad Al Sabah. Moroccan Foreign Minister Muhammad Boncetta, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) political department chief Farouk Kaddoumi, and PLO executive committee member Mahmoud Abbas, sources said.

The Moscow visit is in line with resolutions adopted by the restricted ministerial committee which has been meeting bere. The meeting ended Friday. The restricted ministerial committee groups representatives from Saudi Arabia. Kuwait. Algeria. Syria. the PLO and Arab League Secretary-General Chadii Klibi.

Klibi Friday night called on PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to send a personal representative to Taif to discuss future Lebanese-Palestinian relations, the Palestinian Wafa news agency reported from Beirut.

Meanwhile, a senior Soviet Middle East expert indicated Friday that the Soviet Union has no immediate plans for stepping up military support for Palestinian and Syrian forces in Lebanon, asserting that Moscow was giving them "sufficient" belo.

Yevgeny Primakov, chief of the Eastern Affairs Institute of the Soviet Academy of Science, told a press conference that the Sovier Union fully supported forces resisting the "barbaric" Israeli invasion of Lebanon. "I think the Soviet Union is giving sufficient all-round help - that naturally includes military aid - to those resisting the aggression." Primakov said when asked about a possible increase of military support for the Syrian Army and the PLO if Israel tried to

U.N. session 'deadlocked'

UNITED NATIONS. July 3 (AFP) -Overshadowed by Soviet-U.S. talks in Geneva, the United Nations General Assembly special session on disarmament bas run into such differences in committee that it might close on July 9 without adopting the traditional "action plan".

Participants at the closed-door committee sessions said differences between key countries were so basic that writing a final document nn arms limitation proposals appeared unfeasible. The greatest disagreement is between the United States and the Soviet Union for whom "everything is going on as if neither one nor the other superpower wanted to make the least concession before seeing what it can get at the bilateral negotiations (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks - START) which have opened in Geneva." one source

The United States refuses to budge from the "action plan" it accepted after the first U.N. disarmament special session in 1978. The Soviet Union is ready to make new pledges concerning both nuclear and conventional arms, but only on the basis of its own

POWs beaten to death

UNITED NATIONS, July 3 (Agencies) -A Canadian doctor who spent two years with the Palestine Crescent Society in Lebanon said he saw Israeli soldiers beat to death four prisoners captured in Lebanon.

Dr. Chris Gainnou, who said he was medi-cal director of the Nabatiyeh Hospital and was working in Sidon during the recent fighting in Lebanon, made the allegation at a press conference at the United Nations sponsored by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

The Totonto-born doctor said he witnessed the bombing of residential areas and refugee camps, the shelling of hospitals and the indiscriminate beating of prisoners.

"I have witnessed .. four prisoners beaten to death," be said. "I was called upon by an Israeli soldier to examine two of the cadavers and pronounce death," he added.

Dr. Giannou also said be had seen women and children being allowed to pass through Israeli lines back into a refugee camp, and the shelling of the camp resuming afterweards. He called on Israel to allow independent observers from a recognized international agency to visit and examine the thousands of prisoners in Israeli custody.

He said he was detained by the Israelis from June 13 to 16 in Sidon, and then until June 20 at Megide. The Istaeli authorities denied holding him and two Norwegian colleagues until June 8, despite representations by their governments, he said. He was released unconditionally June 20.

Giannou said that while he was working at the Lebanese government Hospital on the outskirts of the Palestinian refugee camp, near Sidon, the hospital was hit five to six times during Israeli shelling.

"One shell hit the emergency reception department and killed hetween 40 and 50 people who had taken refugee there, he said, adding that 20 others inside a hospital were killed, including a woman who had given birth five hours before. "I am not a spokesman nor representative of PLO," he maintained. Seated beside him at the news conference was Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO's chief U.N. observer.

Sri Lanka arrests hijacker COLOMBO. July 3. (R) — A Sri Lankan who hijacked an Italian airliner from New government request to extradite him under arrested Saturday, police said. Sepala Ekanayaka, his Italian wife and their four-year-old son were held by police in the southern Sri Lankan city of Galle.

The 33-Year-old Hijacker, who arrived here with a ransom of $300,000, was on his way to his village in the south after checking out of a five-star hotel here earlier Saturday. Police at Galle said Ekanayaka was arrested on orders from Colombo and they were holding him till a police team arrived to take him and his family back. A chief inspector of police and four police constables left Colombo for Galle, 70 miles (110 km) away, to take charge of the hijacker, police said.

It was not immediately clear what charges would be pressed against Ekanayaka. He was questioned Friday about his alleged connections with an international drug trafficking the 1970 Hague convention on air piracy. Italian Ambassador Franco Micheli de Bitase called on Sri Lankan Foreign Minister Sahul Hameed to discuss the request.

Ekanayake who had been spending the ransom money freely, had left Colombo accompanied by his family and several friends. In Montreal, the International Civil Aviation Organization said Friday Ekanayaka must either be prosecuted in his homeland or extradited. A spokesman for the organization, a U.N.

body handling aviation affairs, noted that Italy, Thailand and Sri Lanka, the three countries concerned in the hijacking, were signatories of the 1970 air piracy convention.

Under the terms of the convention, there are no exceptions. He can either be prosecuted in Sri Lanka or extradited to Italy or Thailand," the spokesman added.

Kaddoumi spells stand

Wazzan optimistic of resolving crisis

BEIRUT, July 3 (Agencies) — Lebanese Premier Shafiq Wazzan Saturday denied that an agreement on armed Palestinian presence in Lebanon had been concluded, Wazzan, bowever, expressed optimism that a solution would be reached.

·We are presently in the middle of the road toward reaching a solution." he said. On the other hand, Farouk Kaddoumi, head of the PLO Political Department, in an interview published Saturday said the organization had presented in a plan containing general principles for a solution and regulating relations between the movement and the Lebanese authorities. He rold the Kuwaiti newspaper Al -Anba 'a that such a solution should "preserve the rights of the PLO and the Palestinian people to carry out their duties at all levels.

The Palestinian leader stressed that priority in solving the Lebanese-Palestinian issue should now concentrate on "removing the Zionist danger, its traces and violation of Lebanon's sovereignty and independence."

The PLO said Israel had dropped U.S.made cluster bombs on Lebanon and called on President Ronald Reagan to investigate the Israeli crime. PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi told reporters the bombs, which spray scores of bomblets over a wide atea, had killed more than 2,000 civilians in the southern suburbs of Beirut and in Palestinian refugee camps in South Lebanon. Reporters who visited Bouri Al-Braineh camp in South Beirut this week found large quantities of unexploded bomblets. Residents said the devices exploded when picked up and said children who tried to play with them had dleo or lost limbs.

In Tel Aviv. Israeli Chief of Staff Rafael Eytan has declared that Israel would oust the Palestinians from Lebanon irrespective of the manner in which they left the country. He did not discount the possibility of using military force against Palestmians now besieged in West Beirut.

Israeli warplanes for their part carried out for the third night running, dropping smoke bombs and firing flares.

Meanwhile. Israeli armored forces moved into East Beirut Saturday and closed the main crossing points on the commercial quarter that divides the Lebanese capital into two sectors, witnesses reported. The mid-city move came a day after Israel announced it would consolidate its stranglehold on West Beirut.

An estimated half-a-million civilians are still living in the western sector. Thousands fled eastward at the start of the week but many of these have now returned. During the day, as long as the ceasefire lasts, some sort of normal life goes on amid the disruption caused by the siege. An important consolation has been the maintenance of food supplies to West Beirut.

Despite the closure of many shops, street vendors go on selling fresh vegetables and fruit, with young boys wheeling barrows laden with cherries, a feature just now.

Meat and bread are also in good supply and the many families taking temporary refuge in the halls and basements of sturdy buildings appear adequately provided for. A number of restaurants and botels are srill open, doing good trade with the many international journalists who have descended on Beirut. Taxis too, are doing good business with the journal-

A larger number of shops and street stalls reopened Saturday and even joggers and swimmers were in evidence. But the signs of Beirut's perilous position are ever-present. even in the areas which escaped the worst of the destruction inflicted by Israeli shells and

Reports from the northern port city of Tripoli spoke of continued clashes Friday between rival forces. Ten persons were killed and 90 wounded in the fighting between opposing groups, the reports said. Roads leading to the scene as well as shops and other public services were closed as a result.

Gemayel trip explained TAIF, July 3 (SPA) - Information

Minister Dr. Muhammad Abdo Yamani said Saturday that Bashir Gemayel's visit to the Kingdom came at the invitation of the six-member Arab Ministerial Com-He denied that Saudi Arabia gives preference to any side against the other in Lebanon saying that reports carried by some agencies and stations were misleading. Dr. Yamani reiterated that the King-dom believes in the unity of Lebanon, with all its sects, its independence and sovereignty.

"The Palestine Liberation Organization leaders know well the Kingdom's honorable stand and its constructive initiatives in regard to the Palestine cause," he said.

"We do not believe such statements can originate from Mr. Walid Jumblatt" he said about a report broadcast by the Israeli radio and attributed to Jumblatt. He was quoted as saying that Gemayel's visit to the Kingdom indicates an agreement by Arab countries to nominate Gemayel for the Lebanese presidency and a recognition of the Phalangist Party.

Dr. Yamani accused Israel of spreading malicious reports in the context of its campaign to cast doubts.

PLO kills informer

BEIRUT. July 3 (R) - Palestinian commandos have executed an informer who helped Israelis and suspected commandos in occupied south Lebanon, Palestinian newspaper said Saturday.

Al-Hadaf, published by the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), said a group of Palestinians and Lebanese nationalists broke into the house of the informet, named as Ali Al-Titi, and shot him with a revolvet.

It said Titi was one of the hooded men who picked out suspecied commandos from noncombatant civilians to gather information for

Newsmen see lack of preparations in Falklands operations

LONDON, July 3 (R) - The battle for the Falkland settlements of Darwin and Goose Green almost turned into the biggest British milhary disaster since the charge of the Light Brigade, correspondents who watched the war in the South Atlantic said Saturday.

British paratroops went into action without promised air and naval gun support to be pinned down hour after hour by accurate and sustained Argentine machine gun fire, mortar bombs and artillery, they said. And after the battle, in which 300 men died in a few hours, the scene was horrific with rows of charred corpses, cattle nosing around the battle field covered with human remains, and bodies floating back to the surface from a water-filled mass grave.

British Broadcasting Corporation correspondent Robert Fox said British forces were running out of ammunition and mortar bombs. The tide of battle turned when paratroop commander Colonel H. Jones gave the "follow me" order to his men to charge Argentine machine gun emplacements in which he was killed.

Fox, in an article in the Financial Times called "it was a damned close thing," described the colonel's last order as an "act of almost foolish courage." "It was one of the most extraordinary battalion attacks in the bistory of British arms and it so nearly came to grief," he added.

Britain's Defense ministry Friday conceded that mistakes were made during the 10-week military campaign to recapture the Falklands, seized by Argentina on April 2.

After some correspondents gave uncensored accounts of weapons that did not work and British troops shooting at each other by mistake, a Defense Ministry spokesman said some of the reports do have a ring of truth and declared: "Of course things went awry. Mistakes were made."

The Fox account said one plan for a night raid on Darwin and Goose Green was scrapped on orders from London as being too

The decision to attack the twin settlements, Fox said, invited the most glorious defeat since the British light cavalry brigade mistakenly charged the Russian guns, with only 195 survivors from 700 men during the Crimean war battle of Balaclava in 1854. He said the assault was almost canceled when senior officers heard to their amazement a news item on the BBC world service that the paratroopers were poised to attack Darwin. "That night the Argentines reinforced with three companies by helicopter." Fox said almost all the heavy lifting capacity of the task force, three Boeing Chinook helicopters and a squadron of Wessex helicopters went down with the Atlantic con-veyor container ship, sunk by Argentine air-

This meant that the British had to march the 50 miles (80 km) across west Falkland for the final attack on the main Argentine garrison, carrying their equipment all the way. He also said British frigates were too lightly armed to beat off more than three attacking Argentine aircraft and the blowpipe portable missile used by troops after the May 21 landing at San Catlos Bay proved effective only against slow moving planes. And during the final push on Port Stanley that ended with the Argentine surrender on June 14, it was discovered that the Argentines were using the latest British radio intercepting devices which could plut a radio transmitter after the operator had given the first few words of a message. According to Fox, this was a more advanced piece of equipment than most British units possessed. Meanwhile, two correspondents wrote Friday that British troops on the islands sometimes shot each other and Argentine jets killed 50 men who were watching films while waiting to leave a landing ship.

The reports by Bob McGowan of the Daily Express and Gareth Parry of the Guardian, who were with the British South Atlantic task force, also said publicity in London about unexploded bombs led the Argentines to correct their faulty fuses. They said that in some cases the Argentines were better armed, clothed and fed than the British.

In Buenos Aires, President Bignone swore in his 10-man cabinet Friday and received warm praise from civilians for his first speech. pledging an end to military rule and significant change in national economic policy.

The 54-year-old retired Army general installed his ministers, including one army colonel nine civilians, in a brief ceremony at government house, scene of his own inauguration Thursday.

In a post-war announcement, the army said Friday that it suffered a total of 156 dead and 105 missing in the 74-day undeclared war for possession of the islands. The Army announcement, added to earlier Air Force and Navy casualty figures, boosted the total of dead and missing in the three services to at

Palestinians build new fortifications

commandos, wielding picks and shovels, built new fortifications Friday around their camps and along the Mediterranean seafront in Israeli-besieged west Beirut.

A correspondent saw one group of commandos digging slit trenches for infantrymen on the edge of the Palestinian shanty town near Beirut's southern outskirts. A second group was seen building earthen barricades and sand — bagged fortifications to forestal any Israeli landing attempt near embassy row on the Mediterranean coast.

Several streets in the residential coastal neighborhoods were blocked off by twometer — high red earthen embankments and trenches were even being dug on the beaches. One Palestinian official who declined to be identified said the commandos were fortifying new positions because they expected possible new "military pressure" in the form of limited Israeli attacks on the Palestinian enclave despite ongoing negotiations to bring about a peaceful settlement.

Israel bas warned repeatedly in recent days it will not tolerate Palestinian "feet dragging" ual envoy Philip C. Habib.

Meanwhile. scores of refugee families. oefving the Israeli psychological campaign to empty west Beirut of its inhabitants, were returning home Friday to stay. Many shrugged off the Israeli intimidation as a bluff while others said they were simply desperate and would prefer to be home irrespective of the dangers of an Israeli storming of west Beirut.

In another development. North Korea has expressed readiness to send "volunteers" to Lebanon to fight alongside Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) commandos against Israeli troops. The offer came in a Pyongyang government statement released to the press by the North Korean Embassy in Peking Fri-

"The government of the Democratic Peo-ple's Republic of Korea solemnly declares that if the Palestinians and other fighting Arab peoples request it, it will extend every form of support and encouragement to them. including the dispath of volunteers." the statement indicated.

HAIG'S POLITICAL DEMISE

Alexander Haig is still in his office in the State Department in Washington. Whether he was dismissed or whether he had resigned is not what matters. He is politically finished. He has to stay in his office to discharge whatever tasks he is still to he entrusted with pending Congress' confirmation of his successor George Shultz — a process which is expected to take around two weeks.

Confirmation hearings can get long and tedious. They tend to take the form of detailed "general knowledge" question, of the type that young students in the lower rungs of their college education have to submit to from time to time; questions like "Where is Zimhahwe situated?". "What is the name of the current president of such and such country?", "When did the American Revolution end?" "Is Paris the capital of Italy or France?" (and here the candidate to the exulted State Department post is usually informed that he can have one stah and one stah only at an answer).

What is even more peculiar is that many candidates actually fail and fail quite hadly. There was the celebrated, though by no means exceptional, case of an aspirant actually answering that Zimbabwe was a Chinese province, and an equally celebrated one in which an aspirant informed his hearers that Hitler was a Communist leader Very peculiar, as we said, but that's the way that particularly rancid cookie. America's foreign policy, crumhles. Poor Mr. Shultz, however, will he lucky to escape with such a line of questioning. In addition to having to decide such controversial matters as to whether it was Hitler who was the Nazi while Stalin was the Communist. he will have to suhmit to strict questions as to the depth of his commitments tn "poor little Israel's" security and its natural right to devastate any country it chooses and murder its inhabitants - but murder mostly women and children - with that proverbial clan which its armed forces display to the unsuppressed pleasure and admiration of the "free world. Shultz will also bave to give assurances that his former connections with a company which has dealings with the Arah world will in no way "cloud" his judgment in this matter. If he passes this part of his test. then it is certain that his answers to such questions as "What is Zimbahwe?" will not stand in the way of his appointment. Meanwhile that blood stained murderer of Beirut, of Tyre and Sidon, 'Al' Haig, sits in his office tinkering with whatever tasks he is still entrusted with by Reagan.

Saudi Arabian press review

Saturday's newspapers hailed the outcome of the Arab League Ministerial Committee meeting and stressed that it had laid a " firm base" for a collective Arab action to protect Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

· Okaz said the committee's decision to meet in Taif under the chairmanship of Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal had reflected "Arah confidence in the Kingdom's role in support of Arah and Islamic causes.

. The paper asserted that the Arab states, including the legitimate authority in Lebanon and the PLO, "reject the Israeli occupation of Lebanon and the dangerous political goals of this occupation to Lebanon's sovereignty and the Palestinian beorle.

Referring to Lehanese rightist militia commander Bashir Gemayel's meeting with the committee members. Okaz said, The Lebanese Maronites are griginally Arabs and their national commitments are no less than those of any other Arab side."

C'Al-Bilad said the decisions taken by the committee had provided a new concept for an Arab action against Israeli presence in Lehanon.

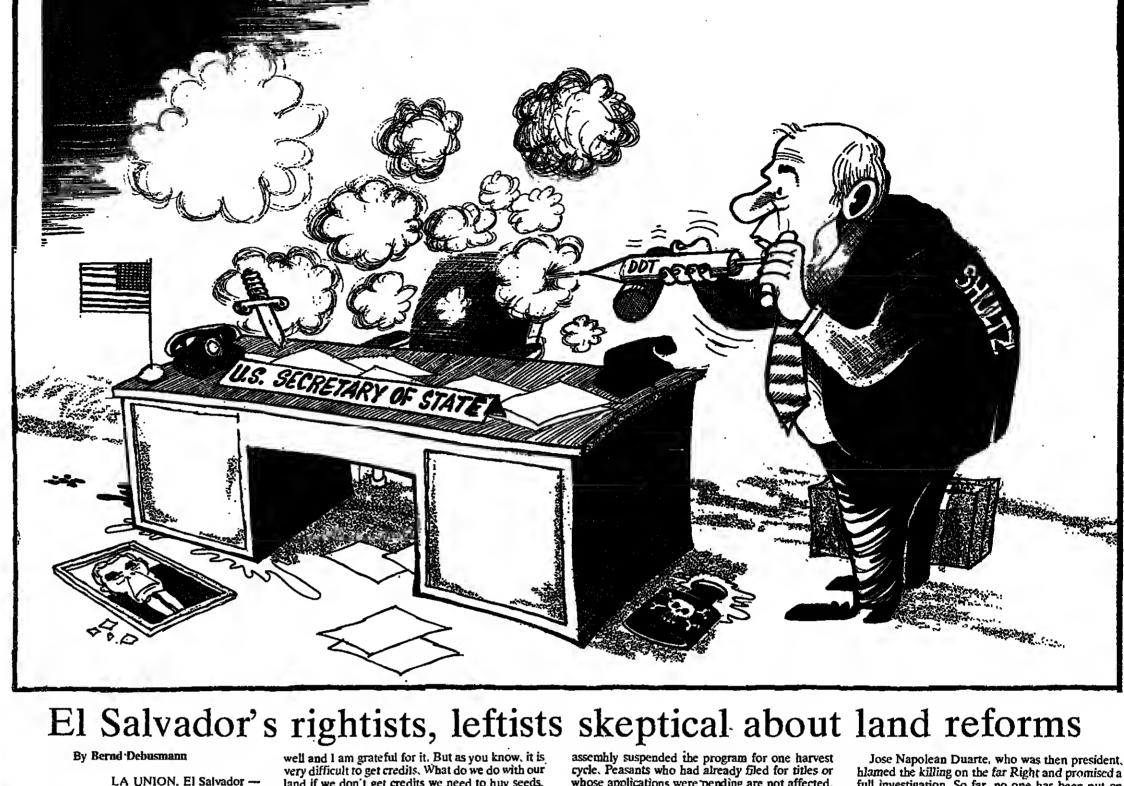

The committee had given the Lebanese factions a chance to reach a collective understanding to confront the Israeli occupation. preserve Lehanon's sovereignty and enable the PLO to continue its struggle against the Zionist occu-

Al-Jazirah wrote "If the Lebanese parties led by the Phalangist Party agree to the Palestinian presence in Lebanon. then it will be easy for both the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples with the help of their Arab brothers to settle the crisis and regulate Palestinian presence in

It added that Gemayel's acceptance of the committee's invitation to attend its meeting in Taif was a "great step toward the implementation of an Arab selthrough a showdown between the Lebanese and the Palestinians."

The paper expressed confidence that an Arab settlement for the crisis would soon he realized to "protect Lebanon's unity and integrity.

Al -Riyadh blamed the U.S. and the West for supporting the Israeli invasion of Lehanon. The paper stressed that the Arabs should he more practical in their dealings with the West because it has not taken any action against the Israeli invasion." (SPA)

Straw sombreros clutched under their left elhows, sun-hurned faces stern, they stepped forward, one after the other, to shake hands with government dignitaries and receive a yellow document turning them from sharecroppers to provisional landowners.

Over a crackling, whining intercom system in the main military barracks of this steamy town, speaker after speaker hailed the occasion as yet another milestone in El Salvador's controversial land reform program.

Decreed in the spring of 1980 under U.S. pressure, the land reform package was designed to correct the uneven distribution of wealth and the social injustice which helped push El Salvador into steadily increasing violence and finally civil war. By the late 1970s, according to United Nations estimates, the top 10 percent of landowners in El Salvador owned almost 80 percent of all arable land. The bottom 10 percent owned less than half a percent. "It is a marvelous scheme," proclaimed a local official in La Union. "It is a great achievement to benefit the Salvadoran farmer." said an army officer. "It is our answer to hostile propaganda that we don't care for the little people."

At a table facing some 250 beneficiaries of the agrarian reforms, the government delegation. including the agriculture minister and the vice president for defense, nodded assent.

Then, in an apparent departure from the script of the ceremony, a young man walked up to the dignitaries' table and asked permission to take the microphone. "Yes." he said. "this reform means land if we don't get credits we need to huy seeds, fertilizers, tools?"

In the courtyard, troops carrying assault rifles listened attentively to the complaint. It pointed up just one shortcoming of a scheme that has been criticized by both the Left and the Right and is a major issue in relations between El Salvador and the United States. The U.S. Congress has made progress on land reform one of its conditions for continued aid to El Salvador, a country almost enfirely dependent on U.S. aid.

"The possibility of an end to American aid is extremely serious for El Salvador," said a European diplomat here. "There is no doubt that the established order would collapse without assistance from Washington, at least as long as the government is fighting a leftist insurrection.

The peasants in La Union were beneficiaries of what is known here as the land reform's phase three, designed to give tenant farmers and sharecroppers ownership of up to 17 acres (seven hectares) of the land they have been working. Largely drafted by Roy Prosterman, an American agriculture expert, phase three affects an estimated 12 percent of the farmland in El Salvador.

According to Salvadoran government figures. there are an estimated 175,000 potential beneficiaries of phase three - the land-to-the-tiller law. But so far, only 36,751 provisional ritles have heen granted and no final definitive title. Land reform experts ascribe the slow pace in granting final titles to complicated bureaucratic procedures and insufficient planning and lack of manpower.

The implementation of phase three was further delayed when the rightist-dominated constituent whose applications were pending are not affected.

The decision, on May 18, was based on the argument that the delay was essential to prevent the farm-hased economy from sliding further toward collapse because many landowners, fearing expropriation, were letting their land lie fallow rather than

In response to the move, the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee cut $100 million from President Reagan's 1983 aid proposal for El Salvador. Despite insistence here that the suspension is temporary, it has strengthened suspicions that the country's rightists are preparing to abolish the reforms and revert to the old order. Emboldened by the assembly's decision, landowners have used armed guards to drive hundreds of peasants from their plots, according to diplomats in San Salvador. The army returned some of the peasants hut the majority remains displaced. In phase one of the land reform, 329 of El Salvador's largest farms were turned into peasant cooperatives with some 30,000 members. So far, only 101 of the former owners have been compensated. Many went into exile to plot revenge. Wealthy right-wingers complained that the government added insult to injury hy assessing the value of expropriated land on the basis of estimates submitted by landowners for tax purposes - without exception far below the real value. Right-wing anger over the reforms found its most violent expression on Jan. 4 last year when gunmen walked into the coffee shop of the Sheraton Hotel in San Salvador and ahot dead two American experts working on the program and the head of the Salvadoran Institute of Agrarian Reform.

hlamed the killing on the far Right and promised a full investigation. So far, no one has been put on "Land reform?" said a wealthy Salvadoran sip-ping coffee on the manicured lawn of his elegant home on the western fringe of the capital, a world apart from primitive shacks of sharecroppers. "Fil tell you why I'm opposed to it: these people (the peasants) are too dumh and too lazy to make it

There are no reliable comparative figures, but ngressmen visiting El Salvador late in June said that production of estates turned into cooperatives appeared to be running at roughly the same level as hefore.

Leftist critics of the reform dismiss the 1980 package as a failure because its centerpiece, phase two. has been put on ice. Under phase two, farms of between 247 and 1,235 acres (100 and 500 hectares) were to be converted. They account for roughly a fourth of El Salvador's farmland and at least 30 percent of the coffee crop, the hackbone of the economy.

There has been no attempt to implement this phase, partly for fear of its impact on the fragile economy and partly because no government here wants to risk alienating the middle class which owns virtually all phase two properties.

Land reform is a long process, a process of reform as well as eduction." said a senior aide of President Alvaro Magana. "We have to instill husiness instincts in the peasants and we have to convince the former owners that the reforms are good for the country.

"It is not an easy task." (R)

Western sanctions' a blessing' for Poland

By Neal Ascherson

WARSAW -Eighty years ago, in the little white palace which is now the British Emhassy in Warsaw, there lived Alexander Wielopolski, "the Polish Hamlet." Although he was a Pole, he accepted the thankless task of governing the Russian part of what had once been Poland on behalf of the Tsar.

"One can do something for the Poles." this pation of the Palestinian home-land," the paper added. amhiguous man declared. "but with them. nothing". While the land simmered with hatred and conspiracy. Wielopolski decided to modernize by force, if he had to.

"Reform and Repression" was his motto. Poles. who adore bistorical parallels, recall it today as they look at Gen. Jaruzelski, Wielopolski also used martial law against a people given to demonstrating on any pretext. He used Cossacks against them; today it is the slovenly ZOMO riot police.

His rule ended by provoking the tragic January Uprising of 1983; whether or not Jaruselski's reign will end that way, he is making the same effon to reform with one band while he represses with the

The centerpiece of this effort is the economic reform. Planned in 1980-81, the years of liberty and tlement for the Lebanese crisis Solidarity, this is the most ambitious and deterwhich Israel has tried to escalate mined effort since the war to transform the entire economy by substituting regulation by market force for the bureaucratic chaos which has brought Poland to bankruptcy.

But today the reform is hampered by the security restrictions of martial law. by the denial of Western credits which holds perhaps 40 percent of Polish industry idle for want of raw materials and parta, and by the continuing fall of living standards which multiplies the impact of radical change on the lives of ordinary families.

Professor Zdzisław Sadowski. deputy commissioner for the reform, is a cheerful, undogmatic intellectual who admits these new problems. "We can expect some progress will take place according to the new rules of the game." he claims modestly.

"and that is important." The first job has been to reverse the huge excess of wages over prices in a period of production, and this bas been begun by the enormous price rises in food and other goods introduced in February. The result is that there is more food in the shops than for 18 months and the queues bave begun to disappear — but largely because the embittered Polish consumers cannot afford the new

Professor Sadowski points out that they are still well below real production costs — less than 50 percent of prices are now uncontrolled - and the new freedom of enterprises to name their own prices has been artificially limited - "to prevent an intolerable upward adjustment." Free pricing still bewilders the nation. Press articles denounce as "absurd" the price differences between brands of shampoo; shoppers are outraged that transport costs can vary the price of goods in different regions. Industrial managers must now face the threat of bankruptcy if their plants cannot pay their way; banks now lend on strictly commercial criteria and already factories like the Polar refrigerator works at Wroclaw are on the brink of ruin. The days of mammoth waste are over. Yet some managers react to danger by blindly buying up resources to hoard - even labor. Professor Sadowski was staggered to discover some industries frantically taking on staff in spite of every reason to reduce inflated work forces. But employment is bound to fall, as enterprises struggle to balance their hooks. The government, well aware of the political perils here with a thoroughly hostile working class and no unemployment pay, is determined to limit it.

On paper, redundant workers could find places in nnderstaffed industries: mining, transport, social work, even agriculture. But with such an appalling housing shortage, there is little labor mobility. Optimistically. Sadowski says: "Unemployment should not be terribly high. If we were extreme in our consistency, we could land up with about 4 percent hut that would be enormous - insupport-

Foreign observers think it could rise much higher.

The reform is still in its early stages, a sickly infant. Even the first basic changes are incomplete. The import famine means that many supplies to factories are still centrally allocated, not freely bought. Though the banks are being as hard-nosed as they dare, some plants, crippled by lack of Western credit have to receive lame-duck coddling.

Workers' self-management, one of the pillars of the original reform plan, is postponed for polifical reasons, though Sadowaki hopes something can be started in a month or two.

Yet. listening to the professor and other Poles, one wonders whether the Western credit blockade (mostly on commercial rather than political grounds) is exclusively harmful. Certainly, it is the main cause of falling production, shortages and increasing poverty, even though most Poles want the blockade maintained as a sign that the world does not accept the destruction of Solidarity. But there are compensations.

One is that while banks and governments refuse to reschedule Poland's dehts, yet hesitate to declare the country bankrupt, Poland enjoys a holiday from crippling repayments.

And the credit blockade is forcing Polish managers to be resourceful, to cut out waste and find new sources of supply - in short, acting as a business: school for the reform. Western sanctions, admitted Sadowski wryly, "are in some ways a hlessing in disguise." (ONS)

A noble task richly rewarded

ipinos spread message of nutrition

By George Nava True

MANILA (Depthnews) - Teresita Quintero, 54-year-old working mother of modest means, shared a lot of economic trials with husband Rafael in raising their ien children. With some of the children still in school, it would have been understandable if she should still be preoccupied with earning a

On the contrary, Teresita has taken on a 'payless' job. For the past four years, she has been a barangay nutrition scholar (BNS), one of the growing number of volunteer community workers whose commitment is to see to it. that nutrition and health practices become part and parcel of the lives of people at the

As BNS. Teresita gets a token allowance of 10 pesos ($1.25) a month. But she sees her rewards as far greater. She reaps them when an ill-fed child is nursed back to health; when mothers dutifully observe the nutrition do's and don'ts learned from her, when a young wife says yes to family planning; or when tots happily finish their bowl of soup at the feeding center she supervises.

The BNS project was started by the National Nutrition Council in 1977. At that time, it became apparent that a more direct link was needed for nutrition and health services to reach the masses. (The council is a government body coordinating the Philippine nutrition program.)

The program is comprehensive in that it is organized at the national, regional, provincial and municipal levels. But it sorely lacked the manpower for implementation at the community level. With the more than 40,000 barangays (the nation's smallest political unit), the BNS was seen as the answer to this

Volunteers were required to be residents of their place of assignment for at least four years prior to their recruitment. The reason is simple. It is important that a field worker be known to and trusted by the people served. They must also be elementary school graduates, speak the dialect, and have leadership qualities.

Recruitment was done by local nutrition units assisted by barangay officials and community groups. Those who qualified were trained by city and district nutrition program coordinators. Until lately, the Nutrition Center of the Philippines had a hand in the training of BNS.

The project was first tried out in the poorer sections of Metro Manila, then implemented nationwide starting 1980. As of April 1982, a total of 10,160 scholars have been trained, 94 percent of whom are now serving. Almost all of them are women, with men numbering less than a hundred.

BNS staffers have extensive duties which include the referral of malnourished children to health centers or hospitals and their inclusion in feeding programs, monitoring of the children's progress, and instruction of mothers on nutrition and health basics as well as in family planning. They also help in the sanitation drive especially the use of proper toilets and destruction of insects' breeding places, and the conversion of home yards into vegetable gardens An initial and on-going

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm 32 and single. Men don't like me. And. I don't hlame them. Since I've been in my teens, my body is covered with psoriasis. Meanwhile. I've taken all the prescribed treatments. Without success. I've given up on doctors and they've given up on me. So, it isn't surprising, is it, that I quit medical treatment? I haven't been to a dermatologist since 1972. My friends tell me to seek medical advice again. But I think it's a waste. Nothing but more disappointment and expense. Am I giving up too soon? - Miss G.

Dear Miss G.: Much too soon. Although I can understand why you have surrendered to this stubborn ailment, there have been some advances in treatment during the past few years. Why not try again? Here's an example of a happier psoriasis patient.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've had psoriasis since I was 9 years old. It has covered my entire body; arms, legs abdomen, back, scalp, even nails. It is a very stubborn and depressing disease. At times, it gets better.

1 am now 20 years old and my skin is almost clear, I was admitted to the hospital and stayed for 9 days. I had coal tar ointment rubbed on my skin every day and had ultraviolet treatments. I have been out of the hospital for a month and a half and continue my treatments (we mornings a week. When my skin is totally clear.

I'll be able to discontinue treatments. I've never been happier in my life. My doctor tells me he can't guarantee that the psoriasis won't return, but, at least, it's better now than it has ever been.

But as I recall, you have often suggested daily naps as an ideal way to overcome tension and nervousness. Do you still believe that naps are advisable? — Mrs. K.

Dear Mrs. K .: Be thankful you have the habit. Many people try and can't nap. In spite of some articles lately that daily naps are the cause can't nap. In spite of some article lately daily naps are the cause of insomnia in many patients. I disagree.

I still believe they are helpful in lessening tension and fatigue. In fact, many patients find that naps relieve their insomnia by producing a feeling of well-being.

Why not conduct a personal experiment? Go without your naps for a week or so. If they help you insomnia, you'll have you answer.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 4-year-old son has enlarged lymph glands in his neck. The doctor said the glands were from an old infection and there was nothing to be concerned about. My son also has a low grade anemia. Do you think we have anything to be worried about? Mrs. F.

Dear Mrs. F .: Glands that persist deserve thorough investigation. Your son should have a complete blood examination. If your doctor agrees, one of the glands should be surgically removed and sent to the laboratory for study. Until these procedures are accomplished, you will be guessing about whether or not the glands should be over-depending on their health status at admission. From October to December last year. some 33 children were accommodated by the center.

Teresita does not consider the facilities adequate. "If there is anything we need right now, it is a better feeding center." she said.

Teresita also conducts mothers' classes where speakers enlighten parents on various aspects of health and nutrition. The classes are held yearly for 10 consecutive days. Some 57 mothers, said Teresita, have graduated from these classes since 1979.

One of Teresita's more important projects was the organization of two communitybased groups — the Barangay Nutrition Committee (BNC) and the Barangay Nutrition Network (BNN) of which she is also secretary. Both offices seek to raise funds through fund campaigns and projects like the selling of ready-made clothing and food

Although the honorarium is small. Teresita believes that a BNS helps a lot by reaching people in remote places where help is really needed. "It is a noble task." she said. "and I see every BNS as a humanitarian who gains a sense of fulfillment in aiding the poor and the

It was indeed the wish to serve that made Teresita join the program. From previous paid jobs as clerk, private tutor and field worker, it seems she has found what she really wants to do.

Her dedication, too, has been well recognized. She was named most outstanding scholar in Makati from 1979 to 1980 and most outstanding barangay service point officer in September 1981 for having been an effective family planning motivator. She also won twice in her barangay's recipe contest for such delicacies as toffee gelatin and fish bean shanghai.

Poverty and ignorance are the prime breeders of malnutrition, according to Teresita, "Nutrition education is largely ignored," she said, "because mothers are busy making a living." Good eating habits are also disregarded in favor of the widely advertised junk foods.

Now in the thick of volunteer work. Teresita longs for a proper office where she could hold mothers' classes and cooking demonstrations, as well as for an emergency clinic to provide free medical services. Since her supply of nutri-pak is purchased from a nutri-bus that comes by only once a month. she hopes that the community could put up a store to sell highly nutritious food supple-

Memo on office of tomorrow

By Robert Yoakum

Dear RHY: Attached to this memo you will find a recent Time magazine article entitled 'Now the Office of Tomorrow.' You won't have to read very far to see that the office of tomorrow bears no resemblance at all to our work place here at Yoakum Fea-

"Please don't misunderstand: I don't envision for us the sort of office shown in this article. Since we are in adjoining rooms. we have no need for TV cameras and electronic blackboards that bring together executives 3.000 miles apart for video conferences.' We'll continue to shout. We don't (unfortunately) require 'huge dataprocessing computers to print payrolls and keep track of sales.":

"And, I needn't remind you, our profit margin wouldn't permit us to spend $20 million like Atlantic Richfield Co. for a company-wide communications system 'with satellite hookups and wall-sized proiection screens.' We can't even afford to have someone come in to wash the floors and windows.

"But there are certain things we could do to improve the situation, so here are some suggestions:

"1. The office of tomorrow looks neat; this place is a mess.

"Husbands have brought their wives here, or vice versa, to show how much worse things could be. Couples have apparently had arguments in the course of which, for example, the wife says to the husband, You are the sloppiest person in the world,' and the husband replies. 'Oh. yeah? Well, I know a place that will make me look as near as a nurse on graduation day, and the wife sneers. 'That's absurd! Who could be messier than you? Show me!' So he brings her to our office where she is forced to admit that. yes, there is a higher degree of disarray one that makes her spouse appear tidy in comparison.

"There are many ways in which your room could be made more presentable, but surely any beautification effort has to begin with those piles of newspapers. What if the president of Control Data Corp., or any of the other enterprises mentioned in that Time article, was photographed with a wall of newspapers surrounding him? People would assume that the photo was intended to show the unattractive state of affairs before the business was modernized. "2. The office of tomorrow is, above all, efficient.

"In such an office, for example, file drawers can be opened without having to shift stacks of newspapers and magazines. Trying to get something out of the file to the right of your desk is like trying to remove a souffle from an over while standing on tiptoes on a slippery floor. "The elimination of those newspapers would boost efficiency at the top of our organization by 50 percent. or more. Think of the time we spend restacking piles of papers that have fallen over! (I wonder how often I've heard that familiar 'ssshthwunk' sound of a newspaper avalanche, followed by a string of expletives from you?) Incidentally. I haven't even tried to file anything beyond the letter 'G' in your personal drawer for a couple of weeks. There are now two drawer for a couple of weeks. There are now two heaps of newspapers in the way and I can't pull the drawer outpast 'F.'

"3. In the office of tomorrow a premiun is placed on information retrieval.

"But onr ability to retrieve essential information is severely limited by the chaotic state of your desk. The other day, while looking for something in the piles of letters, notes, documents, memos, and clippings. I came on a note saying. 'Try to find catalogue for children's Christmas presents.' That was for last Christmas!

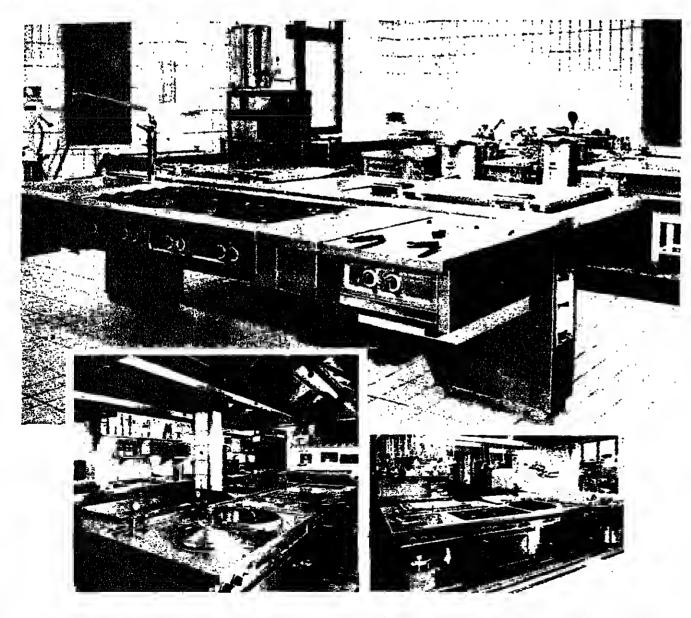

"You always tell visitors that you know where everything is on that desk, but we've been together for 12 years now and the truth is that when you say 'I can my hand right on it' you may, with luck, put your hand on it in half an hour or so. And, as you know, some stuff seems to have disappeared altogether. "In conclusion, let me point out that the last time I wrote a memorandum along these lines we were going to discuss it. But by the time we got around to the discussion. the memo had been lost. This time I'm keeping the original and giving you a copy.

"If we can't make Yoakum Features into the office of tomorrow we can at least try to make it recognizable as an office, Right now it looks more like a staging area for a paper reprocessing plant. Bonnie."

WASHINGTON July 3 (AFP) - President Ronald Reagan assured an influential senator last month he did not want a date set for the suspension of arms sales to Nationalist China (Taiwan). The Washington Post reported Saturday.

The Post said that at a White House meeting on June 18, attended by Vice President George Bush and senior White House aide Edwin Meese. Sen. Barry Goldwater (Republican, Arizona) said be bad learned from Taiwanese sources the State Department was preparing a schedule for suspen-

But, the paper reported. Reagan said that he had never heard of any such texts, adding, I wouldn't sign them if they came to me"...

The Post said that on Thursday the president studied proposals on an arms suspension from outgoing Secretary of State Alexander Haig but returned them to the department and the National Security Council for amendments. The newspaper pointed out that even China appeared to have dropped such demands.

The State Department refused to comment on reports that Haig proposed that Reagan limit arms sales to Taiwan, Spokesman Alan Romberg also denied the department had lied to White House aides about the China issue, which some accounts have said was a factor in Haig's resignation.

Japan unveils plan to double N- power announced a program to double output of electricity from nuclear power stations by 1990 while pressing ahead in the controversial fields of nuclear fuel reprocessing and the technology of fast-breeder reactors. The plan was outlined to the cabinet by the directorgeneral of the Science and Technical Agency. Icbiro Nakagawa, who told reporters the goal was to double nuclear electricity to 46 million kilowatts by the end of the decade.

Estimated spending on nuclear energy in the next 10 years will be some 5,400 billion yen ($21 billion) with about three quarters of the money coming from the government.

The program calls for Japan to develop its own nuclear fuel reprocessing cycle — reprocessing of used uranium fuel basically involves extracting uranium-235 that did not fission in a reactor along with plutonium produce in the nuclear operation. These can then be used as fuel.

Japan and other countries, including Britain, France and the Soviet Union have begun reprocessing programs although, in the United States. commercial reprocessing was postponed by the Carter administration.

in nuclear warbeads and president Carter argued that the creation of too much of it raised the risk of nuclear arms proliferation.

Nakagawa called Friday for Japan to develop new types of light water and advanced thermal convertor reactors, both of which can use plutonium fuel as a stopgap measure prior to the introduction of a Japanese fast-breeder reactor.

Fast reactors burn plutonium in a reaction that 'breeds' more of it during operations, further extending the life of the original uranium fuel. Anti-nuclear lobbyists hotly oppose them because they use plutonium and 6.000 people demonstrated Friday in the city of Tsuruga, against a bearing on proposals to build a prototype breeder plant there.

Citing development problems, Friday's nuclear plan puts back the date for introducng a commercial fast-breeder to around 2010, from 1995 set in a previous long-range plan made in 1978.

The sources said Friday a long-awaited telex detailing the request was sent by the Romanian Foreign Trade Bank late Thursday and should he followed shortly by an information package on the country's Romania has debts to the West of more than $10 billion. The International Monetary Fund recently approved the release of $500 million to the country after it agreed to a number of reforms recommended by the agency's analysts. The banking sources said Romania bad asked its more than 200 Western creditor banks to give their reply on a rescheduling by the end of this month.

They said Romania was seeking to defer payment of 80 percent of 1981 arrears and 1982 maturities over six and a half years. Last year's arrears are estimated at about $500 million and 1982 maturities at about $2.4 billion, the sources added.

Investors hopeful of upturn

NEW YORK. July 3 (AP) - Though the stock and bond markets have shown few signs of life lately, bopes persist on Wall Street that midyear 1982 will mark a turning point in the United States economy.

The key figures in the script written by many economists for the next several months are American consumers - recipients in the past week of a 10 percent income-tax cut and a 7.4 percent increase in social security payments.

If all goes according to plans, that extra money, spread through millions of pocketbooks, will act as the seeds for a recovery from the recession. If the consumer does not respond with enthusiasm, analysts fear that it could be a long dreary summer in the financial markets.

Even the optimists generally don't expect any sudden upsurge in economic activity. For one thing, the infusion of money from the tax cut and social security benefit increase will be

Argentina may devalue peso

BUENOS AIRES. July 3 (AFP) - The new government headed by Gen. Reynaldo Bignone is expected to devalue the peso by more than 80 percent, according to press

The reports said Friday a series of measures in the economic and social field is likely to be approved on Monday as part of the preparations for a return to democracy early

The measures are expected to include a 30 percent increase in prices charged by state undertakings, and an across the board pay increase of about 25 percent.

The package, aimed at boosting output and reducing unemployment, is likely to be announced hy new Economy Minister Jose Maria Dagnino Pasttre, the reports said. Many experts believe the policy will increase the inflation rate to the unheard of heights of between 400 and 500 percent over the next 12 months. This compares with Argentina's record figure of 347 percent in

The dollar has been held officially at less than 16.000 pesos since the Falklands dispute. but the rate is likely to jump to about 30.000 pesos reflecting a devaluation of 1.500 percent in 18 months.

In his first speech Thursday night since taking office, the president said the measures were to prepare the way for a return to democracy which is to be achieved by March 1984 at the latest.

These generals made frequent mention of "the military process of national reorganiza-tion" which guided governmental philosophy of the milhary for over six years. But Gen. Bignone's speech made no mention of this: in what was seen as evidence that a page has been turned here following the military defeat over the Falklands.

U.S. to set up N-power unit

WASHINGTON, July 3 (AP) - A U.S. government licensing hoard announced that it has given its approval for manufacture of the world's first floating nuclear power plant.

A three-member licensing board of the Nuclear Regulator Commission voted unanimously to grant manufacturing license for the floating atomic reactors, which would be mounted on barges anchored several miles

The decision will not become final until it is reviewed by an NRC appeal board and the full commission over the next 80 days. Westinghouse Electric Corporation, which had tried for nine years to win approval for the plant, said it was pleased with action of the licensing board. However, the decision will not mean immediate construction of the plant since utilities which had agreed to buy the reactors in the early 1970s canceled their orders because of the long licensing delays.

Westinghouse first petitioned the NRC to grant the licenses in 1973 but the applications as tied up for years by opponents who claimed the reactors presented large safety

Financial Roundup

Dollar rates forge ahead

JEDDAH, July 3 - The dollar closed on a slightly firmer note on the Friday night New York markets, but Eurodollar deposit rates wavered with some falls recorded in the shorter and medium tenors.

Federal Reserve "Fed fund" prime lending rates opened at 15 percent levels but closed nearer to 13 34 percent. The markets were cautiously awaiting to see if this fall will be sustained next week when the markets re-opened, especially if the "Fed" rigidly adheres to the newly-proposed Fed fund target ranges of hetween 10 and 15 percent from the previous 12 and 16 percent ranges. The money supply figures also cast a dampener on the money markets. with the latest weekly figures showing a fall of $2.2 billion — a fall for the second consecutive week.

In the bullion markets, gold and silver prices traded thinly in a stable market. Gold prices closed at $313.00 in Europe, but fell back to $312.50 in New York by the close. Silver prices traded more erratically between $5.89 and 5.95 an ounce - boosted by confirmed reports that Peru is planning to suspend silver production for the time being, until prices reach over $8 per ounce. The Peruvians are also reportedly enlisting the help of the Mexican and Canadian governments in their bid to curtail or suspend silver production from these countries. In the local markets. Saturday saw a quiet and dull trading day with rates hardly moving from opening levels. Riyal deposit remained generally firm with most tenors quoted above the 15 percent levels. The one-month JIBOR was quoted at 14 3/4 and 15 1/8 percent (later dropping by about 1/8 percent) while the longer tenors were quoted at 14 % - 15 1/4 percent for the one-year. Week-fixed was dealt at 14-15 percent but most activity had ceased by

In the exchanges, spot riyal/dollar rates opened at 3.4403 - 08 levels, hut some commercial demand for the dollar pushed the rate up to 3,4410 - 15 in some moderate trading. The Bahraini-based OUB's offshore banking units were generally more active compared to last Saturday's trading volumes.

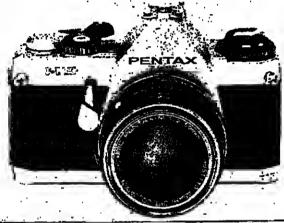

In the New York exchanges, the German mark seemed once again to be under pressure, closing the weak at 2,4735 levels from the earlier Thursday/Friday levels of 2.4600 in Europe. Bundesbank support to ease this pressure on the mark as bank of England support for sterling which saw the pound trade at 1.7340 levels from The impending British railways strike from this Saturday east a shadow over sterling the markets.

In other currency news, the French franc traded at a lower level of 6.8580 from 6.8320, while the yen traded at 256.35 from 255.00 levels. The Swiss franc bounced hack to 2,1025 from 2,1090 levels despite a 1/2 percent cut in Swiss interest rates announced over the weekend by the major Swiss clearing banks.

Carl Lewis, Evelyn sprint to new marks

Lewis and Evelyn Ashford set meet records in the men's and women's 100-meter dashes Friday night in leading the United States to 1-2 sweeps in the opening two events of its 18th dual track-and-field meet against the Soviet Union.

Lewis, the world's top-ranked sprinter and the 1981 Sullivan Award winner as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete, needed a furious finish to edge teammate Calvin

Lewis, winner of the 100 and the long jump in each of the past two national outdoor championships — the only athlete this cen-tury to accomplish the feat — was timed in 10.09 seconds. His clocking broke the meet record of 10.15 set American Sieve Riddick in 1976.

The victory avenged one of Lewis' few setbacks in the 100. Smith had edged him by .02 of a second last week in a triangular meet against West Germany and Africa at

With second-half goals

MADRID. July 3 (R) — Host nation Spain crashed out of the World Cup when they were heaten 2-1 by former champions West Germany here Friday night,

The defeat means a host team will not win the Cup for the first time since Mexico in 1970, breaking a sequence of victories by the West Germans (1974) and the day's fallen champions Argentina (1978).

West Germany who fought out a goalless draw with I ugland on Tuesday must now wait for the result of the final Group "B" march between Spain and 1-ngland next Monday. I ngland must win by a hetter margin to qualify for a semifinal place ahead of the West Germans.

England decries rule on drawing lots

MADRID July 3 (R) — England were appealing here Saturday against the interpretation of a ruling which could deprive them of a place in the semifinals.

The I ngland camp protested against Friday's clarification of a rule by the International Football Federation (FIFA) on drawing lots to decide semifinal places if teams tinish caual in their second-round groups.

FIFFA said first round placings — but not points or goals - would be taken into account if teams finished exactly equal in the second round. England would be affected by the ruling if they beat Spain 2-1 in their decisive match next Monday the margin West Germany achieved here Friday night, England and West Germany drew 0-0 last Tuesday.

The FIFA regulation says: "If the teams involved have secred the same number of goals the team having had a better classification in its group at the end of the matches of the first round will aualify."

The confusion was over what was meant by "hetter classification." The clarification, published by FIFA's Swiss general secretary besef Blatter said: "Better classification means being first or second in the group matches of the first round."

fingland and West Germany both topped their first round groups, But England manager Ron Greenwood had assumed England had the hetter classification because they compiled more points and achieved a better goal average than the Germans.

"The clarification is Blatter's personal interpretation. We have a right to appeal I ngland press spokesman Glen Kirton said Saturday. England's other main worry was the fitness of tenacious attacker Steve Coppell who suffered a recurrence of a kneemours while out for a walk the day after the match against West Germany.

The injury - fluid on the knee - has forced Coppell to rest, and it was not certain whether he would be able to train later Satur-

Platini to strengthen France

MADRID July 3 (R) - France will have midfield star Michel Platini hack for Sunday's crucial second round Group 'D' match against a Northern Incland team who have serious doubts about their first two goalkeep-

The Irish must win in the Calderon Stadium to reach the semifinal while France med only a draw. French manager Michel rtidalgo said Saturday he would retain the midfield trio of Jean Tigana Alain Giresse and Bernard Genghini who overpowered Austria last Monday hur Platini would join them in a roving role.

Striker Didier Six makes may for Platini hut Six who has played well in the finals, is likely to come on later as a substitute for fellow-striker Gerard Solder, Hidalgo said. .They only other French change will be at right-hack where Manuel Amoros of Monaco, who missed the 1-0 win over Austria because of suspension returns in place of Patrick Battiston. Irish manager Billy Bingham, who played on the right win the last time his country took part in the finals in 1958 will announce his team Sunday. For Bingham, the match will have a nostalgie tinge. It was France who put his own side out of the Cup in 1958 with a crushing 4-0 victory. The French went on to finish thrid. France also hear Northern Ireland 4-0 in a friendly in Paris four months ago hut Hidalgo is quick to point out that the Irish were in a preparatory phase and are much stronger team now.

Bingham has doubts about veteran goalkeeper Pat Jennings who missed the 2-2 draw with Austria Thursday hecause of a groin strain and Iim Platt, who strained his hack making a save in that match. He will decide Sunday whether Jennings or Platt are fit but 26-year-old part-timer George Dunlop, who gave up his joh as a dock worker in Belfast to get to the finals, is standing by to uin his first cap.

Northern Ireland's 17-year-old striker Norman Whiteside took a heavy knock on one calf during the Austria game and was fighting to get fit today. The Irish can use full-hack Mal Donaghy, who missed the Austria match after being sent off in the 1-0 first round win over Spain, hut Bingham may prefer to keep experienced Sammy Nelson.

Prohable teams: Northern Ireland - Pat Jenniungs or Jim Platt, Jimmy Nicholl, Chris Nicholl, John Met Telland, Sammy Nelson, Martin O'Neill, Dave McCreery, Sammy Mellroy, Billy Hamilton, Gerry Armstrong, Norman Whiteside.

Soviet Union faces uphill task BARCHLONA July 3 (R) -- The Soviet

Union's strength will be fully tested in the Nou t amp Stadium here Sunday night when they must heat Poland to reach the World Cup semifinats.

The Soviets long considered an outside favorite for the Uup, won their opening seeand round Group 'A' match against Belgium thanks to a solitary goal by Khoren Uganesyan, But their failure to score more means nothing less than a win will take them into the last four at the expense of Poland who crushed the Belgians 3-0.

For the Potes an encounter with the Soviets is little short of a World Cup final in itself and star forward Zhignies. Boniek, hatrick hero against Belgium, is conscious of the pressure on them to oin. He played in the side which went down 4-1 to the Soviets in 1977 hut said here: "If have a feeting we will win. We want to do it for our people,"

Political upheavals in Poland prevented the national side from preparing properly for the finals but after a patchy start they have slammed eight goals in their last two games. If Bonick and the irrepressible Grzegorz Lato reproduce the form they showed against Belgium they must be favorities to get at least the draw they need to go through.

But they are unlikely to enjoy as much space against the cool Soviet defense, whose composure stems from the knowledge that behind them is one of the best goalkeepers in the world Renat Dasayev Dasayev's faultless handling has been one of the feature of the tournament and fans everywhere will be intrigued to see how he copes with Bonick's shooting power.

Having seen the Soviets labor to their 1-0 win over Belgium. Polish manager Antony Piechiczek is convinced his team can win. "Now, more than ever I am sure we can eliminate the Soviet Union and reach the semifinal" he said.

Piechniczek added: "If the Soviets play as they did against Belgium, we will have no problems." But he recognized that the Soviet players may have been saying themseyles for Sunday's devisive clash. "They will be much more motivated against us." he conceded.

Soviet manager Konstatin Beskov, who refused talk about other teams, said of his own; "I think we are playing good foothall and although we don't have the individuals Brazil have we are still not had. "We've got a young team with an average age of 24 and our two years of work is beginning to bear fruit."

The Soviets played open attacking football in the first round but lost their way against the disciplined Belgians. It experienced stars such as Oleg Blokhin and Ramaz Shengelia Austria's World Cup team also came in for criticism. The leading Austrian daily newspaper Kronenzeitung ' said striker Hans Krankl and his teammates had "fallen into disgrace" after their hard-fought 2-2 draw Thursday with gutsy Northern Ireland than bumped Austria from the tournament.

Carlos Caszely who missed a penalty in Chile's opening first-round match against Austria and played below expectations throughout the tournament was scorried by reports from Chile that his family had been threatened.

The Kuoait team which opened with a erednable draw against Czechoslovakia hut then slumped to a 1-4 defeat against France escaped criticism at home. But Kuwait's head ceach Carlos Alberto Parreira of Brazil was criticized widely in the Kuwaiti press. One newspaper suggested that his factics "had hrought disgrace on the nation."

Almost anyone would cover the jack of hearts with the queen, holding the Q-10 in the given circumstances. # 6 miners killed in S. Africa shooting

JOHANNESBURG. South Africa, July 3 (AP) — Police and security guards shot and killed six black miners during a second night of tioting in the world's richest gold mining district, a mine spokesman said Saturday. Three persons were killed at the West Driefontein mine and others at the Grootylei

Police reported the gold mining district quiet following the arrest of hundreds of miners. The rioting began Friday at the West Driefontein mine, part of the richest gold mining complex in the world, and spread to the Buffelsfontein. Stilfontein and Grootylei

Miners stoned cars and buildings and set offices and other buildings on fire. Police were called in to help mine guards and used tear gas, dogs and a helicopter equipped with a siren to disperse the miners.

The rioting apparently was triggered by the introduction this week of pay raises for black miners. A spokesman for the Gold Fields of South African Group, which controls the West Driefontein mine, said the dispute arose over the awarding of 12 percent raises to underground workers while surface workers got 11 percent.

It also was believed recent fatal mine accidents were a factor. Six miners died in an explosion at the Grootylei mine last Sunday.

At West Driefontein, the second night of violence began when miners refused to go underground for the late shift. A mine spokesman said: "They went on the rampage....About 4,000 men from No. 14 hostel seemed to be involved in the unrest.

"A large number of them left the hostel earlier in the evening and toward midnight they launched a surprise attack on the hostel from the surrounding veld. Some of the riot-control vehicles were besieged and the occupants, in imminent danger of their lives, had to fire shots in self-protection. There men were shot dead and one critically wounded."

He said several hundred men alleged to be ringleaders were separated from the main body of workers at West Driefontein, near Carltonville about 64 kilometers southwest of Johannesburg, and were being fired. The spokesman said many miners had refused to work until threatened with dismissal.

At Grootvlei, on the eastern fringe of Johannesburg, several thousand miners went on the rampage Friday, setting on fire a training center, kitchen and hostels, a mine spokesman said.

Police were called and opened fire on the miners when they refused to disperse, the South African Press Association reported.

Dutch family to return girl

JAKARTA, July 3 (AFP)— A Dutch family which adopted an Indonesian girl a year and a half ago was Saturday reported to have agreed to return her, after learning she was kidnapped before being sold to a children's home foundation.

The foundation's attorney, O.C. Kaligis, was quoted by the Merdeka (freedom) daily as saying the agreement had emerged from correspondence between the Frederick de Best family of Menaidum, Netherlands, and the child center.

On June, 30, the central Jakarta District Court annulled the adoption — legalized in December 1981 in the same court — after a complaint from the girl's father.

The court took into account a decision by another Jakarta court last January that the girl Kurniaty, renamed Miyah, had been abducted. The latter court also passed prison terms on a person found guilty of kidnapping and on accomplices.

The attorney said that as far as he knew this was the first case involving the two countries in which a legally arranged adoption had later been invalidated. He said he would leave for the Netherlands in August to take back the child at the joint expense of the De Best family and the foundation.

BONN. July 3 (AFP) — Several West German trainec officers in Hamburg are being investigated after allegations they indulged in "fascist activities" and listened to Nazi-era music and propaganda speeches. Defense Ministry sources said Saturday.

The trainee officers held a party in a room on June 24. listening to Nazi military marches and a record of speeches by Hitler and Nazi Air Force Chief Hermann Goering, the sources said. Witness also said they had heard shots from an alarm pistol, the sources added.

In 1977, a group of trainee soldiers were detained in Munich after singing the storm troopers' marching song and acting out a pogrom (organized massacre). They were later acquitted

hit Moroccans

GIBRALTAR, July 3 (ONS) — The postponed opening of Gibraltar's border with Spain will be greeted with little dismay by the colony's 2,800 Moroccans.

They make up a quarter of Gibraltar's 11,000-strong work force. They live in the most crowded conditions in the colony, under regulations which prevent non-working relatives living with them. They work in the worst-paid jobs — precisely the kind of jobs sought by many of the 7,000 unemployed Spanish workers in La Linea, just across the border. There the unemployment rate is 30 percent, compared with 3 percent in Gibraltar.

The Spanish Government undoubtedly postponed the border opening, planned for June 25, because of the strains imposed by the Falklands crisis. But the border will have to be opened by the time Spain enters the Common Market, theoretically due on Jan. 2, 1984. The threat to many of the Moroccans' jobs may have simply been put off.

When the frontier eventually opens, Spanish workers entering Gibraltar will have two advantages over Moroccans on the jobs market. First, they will be able to accept lower wages. The union rate in La Linea is about half that in Gibraltar in most industries, and accommodation and the cost of living are cheaper.

Second, the Moroccans, who are on one-year work permits and contracts, may stay in Gibraltar for a maximum of six months after they lose their jobs. The Spanish could cross the border indefinitely to look for work.

The Gibraltar Government has pledged to safeguard the jobs of the 1,200 Moroccans employed in the public sector as road-sweepers, cleaners and dockyard laborers. But an open frontier will jeopardize the jobs of many of the 1,600 Moroccans in the private sector, particularly those in the construction, transport and bakery industries, and those working casually.

Gibraltar's Chief Minister. Sir Joshua Hassan, in an interview published in the Spanish press earlier in the year, said that when the Moroccans' contracts finished, their employers would be free to take on other people — a clear reference to Spanish workers.

Cosmonauts undergo health check

MOSCOW, July 3 (Agencies) — French cosmonaut Jean-Loup Chretien and his Soviet colleagues Vladimir Dzbanibekov and Alexander Ivanchenkov were undergoing medical checks Saturday after returning from their joint space mission Friday, Moscow radio reported.

The radio added that Anatoly Berrezovoy and Valentin Lebedev, launched into orbit on May 13, were meanwhile having a quiet day Saturday on the Soyuz T5-Salyut-7 space train after the departure of the other three. The two would spend the day checking systems aboard the train, the radio said.

Koirala seriously ill

KATMANDU, Nepal, July 3 (AP) — Former Nepalese Prime Minister B.P. Koirala, a major opposition leader in Nepal, is reported to be in serious condition after suffering a "second massive stroke" Thursday, doctors said Saturday.

The 67-year-old Socialist leader suffered his first stroke three weeks ago after returning from New Delhi where he had undergone medical treatment. In 1977 Koirala underwent heart surgery in New York and has visited the United States twice since then to be treated.

Koirala, leader of the outlawed Nepali Congress Party, was in power in 1959-60 after he became prime minister in the Himalayan kingdom's first nationwide elections to the parliament.

But he was ousted by the late King Mahendra, father of the present monarch, after a royal takeover of the administration in 1960, the king dissolved the parliament and put Koirala and his colleagues in jail. After his release from jail in 1970, Koirala went to India in self-imposed exile and returned to Nepal seven years later.

ready for return flight

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER, Florida,
July 3 (R) — Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield Saturday prepared the Mojave Desert. President Ronald Reagan will be among those on hand to greet them Sunday — U.S. Independence Day.

Chuck Lewis, a flight director, said the Columbia had experienced only minor problems on this flight and all of them had been solved. He described the 112-orbit mission as 85 to 90 percent successful.

He said there were no problems with any of the Columbia's experimental payloads, apparently including the Pentagon's secret military cargo stowed in the 18-meter-long payload bay.

A slight warping of the spacecraft after prolonged exposure to the cold blocked the bay doors from closing tightly, but once the Columbia warmed up in the sun the doors closed smoothly.

Lewis said a main objective of this mission, which ends the development phase of the sbuttle program, was to register the reactions of the spacecraft to extremes of temperature. He said the shuttle's long cargo-handling arm rocked slightly when it was extended outside the cargo bay during special maneuvers, but it bad shown no ill effects.

Meanwhile, the International Business

Meanwhile, the International Business Machines (IBM) reported that the U.S. Air Force will be involved in all operations of the space shuttle program within five years and will direct its part of them through a separate command center in Colorado, Up to now the military has had only a limited role in the shuttle program and neither NASA nor the Defense Department will discuss the military's present or future involvement.

The IBM report, released this week, deals primarily with computer aspects of the planned command post but also gives a general overview of future U.S. military participation in the shuttle program.

It said the military center, at Colorado Springs, would be in operation by 1987. Nearby, 3,000 meters inside Cheyenne mountain, is the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), a tracking system set up in the early 1960s to warn the United States and Canada of nuclear missile or bomber attacks. It also keeps track of more than 4,500 man-made satellites.

The IBM report said the Air Force space program in the mid-1980s and beyond would use NASA's reusable space shuttle system.

U.S. debating cluster bomb use

By Grace Halsell Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 3 — The United States produces some of the most modern, sophisticated and deadly war equipment and it generously supplies these weapons, including the currently much-debated cluster bombs, to Israel, but with certain strings attached: use only for defensive purposes. Do not use for offensive purposes. That is, to attack your neighbors.

After previous Israeli attacks on Lebanon and on the Israeli attacks.

non and on the Iraqi nuclear facility, U.S. supplied equipment, but past debates have always ended with the U.S. supplying more war equipment to Israel.

Other debates have centered on the use

Other debates have centered on the use of American-made F-15 and F-16 warplanes. The latest debate concerns specifically the use of cluster bombs. Asked in bis June 30 press conference whether Israel had broken an agreement on use of U.S.-supplied cluster bombs in its invasion of Lebanon, President Reagan replied, "There's a review going on now to determine that."

Death for felony ruled out in U.S.

WASHINGTON, July 3 (R) — The Supreme Court ruled against capital punishment for "felony murder" in which a person takes part in a crime in which someone dies but does not actually do the killing.

The ruling affects the law in nine states in which a murder during the commission of a serious felony, such as robbery or rape, is the same legally as if the murder was planned in advance.

The court overturned the death sentence of a Florida man for the robbery and shooting deaths of an elderly couple. Witnesses had testified the man was in a getaway car outside the victims' house at the time.

Rejecting the argument of deterrence, the court said, "putting him to death to avenge two killings that be did not commit or intend to commit or cause would not measureably contribute to the retribution end of ensuring that the criminal gets his just desserts."
